Spain and United Kingdom in the top of the ranking

Players reinforce their blows in the penultimate day

The penultimate day of the championship has shown the nerves of the players. With the closeness of the final, the morning has been highlighted by fast games and the search for the lowest number of strokes in each hole. Although the heat has been present all day the golfers have not slowed down, looking to maintain or raise their positions in the final ranking.

In the individual female category, the first positions have returned to be very disputed between the Toulouse Capitol 1 University and the University of Malaga, Camille Tremoulet and Esperanza Serrano have shown their best game, being in the end the first place for Serrano, with 71 points on this day, what leaves a total of 218 for tomorrow's final. Noemi Carpinelli, of the University of St. Gallen, has climbed to the third position with a score of 85 points.

By teams, the University of Malaga has managed to climb back to first place after the drop suffered in the day yesterday, giving the second position to the Toulouse Capitol 1 University, with 460 and 463 points in total respectively.

In the male category, the individual competition is again led by Jordan Sundborg, from the University of Stirling. The scottish has finished the day with 73 points (213 in total). The second place has also been for the University of Stirling, thanks to the game of Colin Edgar, with 221 points in the three days. Finally, the third place was for Juan Agüera Francos, from the University of Málaga, with 223 points in total.

By teams, the table is still led by the University of Stirling, honoring the sport created in their country. With a great distance, the scottish players show a total score of 655 among the four best players on their team: Jordan Sundborg, Colin Edgar, Mark Napier and Michael Lawrie. The second was for the player from Malaga, who presented a total of 671 points, distributed among the six players representing the host university.

The afternoon has concluded with a special event to encourage the players and organization staff. The Golf Course of Antequera has been the scene of the union of two golf and soccer sports, thus several matches of "Footgolf" have been played, a sport in which players must kick a soccer ball in the holes, throwing into a 21-inch "cup" instead of the usual golf hole.

Pedro Montiel: "There is no good organization without a great planning"

Interview

As the president of the Executive Committee of the organization of these European University Championships of Golf 2019, Pedro Montiel is in charge of supervising all the details of the event.

His work consist in the coordination of the technical team, being his responsibility that everything goes according to plan.

With this, there are already four European Universities Championships and six World Universities Championships that he has organized at the head of the technical team, of which he highlights "they have a lot of experience and they know how to do their job very well". In this sense also highlights the work carried out from the Sports Area of the City of Antequera, which "is willing to help always and already knows well how is the organization of the championships." As in any large organisation, there are many small details that must be fulfilled, as well as the difficulties that arise every day "but thanks to the experience of the entire team of the organization, these details are resolved quickly and successfully."

From the Sports Area of the University of Malaga all the work that is done is realised "with passion, we are very proud of our university and of representing it in international events, all of us who work in the area of sports do so with passion". This position responds to the idea that "sport is undoubtedly a tool that positions the university at a European and global level".

In this Championship, as in the next event led by this team as the Beach Volleyball World Championship 2020, Montiel points out that "nothing is improvised, I am very proud to be at the forefront of this team, because we took the UMA to the first position.
